

MARCH 2022 - ISSUE 2

living well

people living well through healthy relationships

welcome

Greetings from Living Well!

I hope you had a wonderful Christmas and New Year season and are settling well in to 2022. This year as Living Well continues to expand, we are pleased to introduce new members to our team, both of whom are helping Living Well grow in different areas.

Brittany Hicks, based in Phnom Penh, is passionate about pastoral counselling and is also actively helping Living Well grow and develop partnerships with organisations. We are exploring ways to better serve the needs of all of our partners, including schools, churches, sending organisations, NGO's and businesses.

Liv Sinn is a qualified and experienced counsellor, counselling supervisor and clinical leader of counsellors, based in Australia. Liv will help Living Well continue along the path of developing clinical excellence in her role of Clinical and Quality Lead.

We are grateful for these new team members, volunteering their time to serve at Living Well. I hope that you will get a chance to interact with our new team members, as well as our existing team, as we serve you and your organisation this year.

Best regards
Graeme Winthrop

Clinical and Pastoral Counselling

We offer both, so what's the difference?

Our clinical counselors and pastoral counsellors work in conjunction together. We seek to be professional, empathetic, and provide quality holistic care.

Clinical

Relies primarily on peer-reviewed psychology research, with an option for client-directed integration of faith

Seeks to alleviate suffering and distressing symptoms

Relies on diagnosis and follows protocol for treatment

Focuses on individual development, relational issues, addiction, trauma, adjustment or grief; treatment of diagnoses

Pastoral

Relies primarily on scripture as the main source, integrating research when helpful

Seeks to find where God meets us in suffering

Acknowledges diagnosis but focuses on the heart issues

Focuses on life adaptation, relationships, discipleship and conflicts related to values and behavior

PRAYER requests

good connection points and partnerships with our community wisdom for how to meet needs in the community effective incorporation of team members and their gifts

the right clients will find Living Well and have their needs met provision for expanded space to accommodate our counselors and clients
